

ARMY AND NAVY NOTES

Secretary Meyer Will Not Extend System of Nautical Education.

[From The Tribune Bureau]

Washington, May 31.—Secretary Meyer will not extend the system of nautical education.

MEYER WON'T ACT.—The Secretary of the Navy has decided to do nothing toward extending the system of nautical education authorized in the law enacted on March 4, which contemplated the establishment of nautical schools at various places, including New York City. The provisions of the law, to which reference has been made in these dispatches, gave the Secretary the privilege of assigning naval vessels, which might be found available for the purpose, to about ten ports for use as nautical schools. The Secretary was also authorized to detail as superintendent or instructor at such schools any naval officers whose services could be spared. There are few, if any, such officers, excepting those on the retired list, and there are no vessels which can be employed on this duty.

The naval authorities believe there are sufficient facilities for the training of youth in nautical education through the training ships at New York, Boston and Philadelphia. The Navy Department details officers to those vessels and aids the work in every way possible. It is believed that there is no necessity for going to further expense in the matter.
